Emersonian 1974

Professor Leonidas Nickole

He is an educator in the classic sense. He has instilled within us the seed of knowledge, hoping that someday that seed will bear fruit.

He is a man who has been instrumental in the development of Emerson College, helping it grow from a school already noted for its excellence to a school that is now making a major impact in the fields of Theatre, Speech and Mass Communication.

The name and reputation of Emerson College is held in high esteem, due, in part, to the works of Professor Nickole. It is to this man, this leader in the fields of Theatre and Education, that we dedicate our yearbook.

In Memoriam

Dr. Richard Donald Pierce 1915-1973

Dr. Richard D. Pierce taught at Emerson College for over a quarter century. As Academic Dean, Vice-President, and Secretary of the Board of Trustees, he was one of the principal architects of the College as we have known it. He was a renowned scholar, effective administrator, and beloved teacher.

"He enjoyed life and lived it fully. The path of his life was positive and creative."

Ruth Southwick Maxfield 1894-1973

Mrs. Ruth Southwick Maxfield, Professor Emeritus, daughter of past President Henry Lawrence Southwick and Professor Jessie Eldridge Southwick, served Emerson College for fifty years, as teacher, counselor, Dean of Women and Chairman of the English Department.

"She loved teaching, she loved her field of dramatic literature, and she loved her students with whom she shared it."

At times I know my solemn moods
  Disturb your even flow
When I go not paths I choose
  And work so far below

A life to feel a peace with all
  It is by haze I'm pinned
But through the mist I only want
  To be part of the wind

Interdisciplinary Majors

THE INTERDISCIPLINARY WORLD . . .

. . is universal; the phenomenon is a subtle secret mixture of methods aimed at evolving the most important issues regarding The Survival of Mankind on this small planet into tangible concepts suited to youthfully unhampered minds. The Interdisciplinary (IDC) World is crisp and clear, though frightening to those who believe it to be the embryo of a UTOPIA. Should we choose instead oblivion?

Letting the mind transcent the 'student body', abandoning the traditional servitude which specialization perpetuates and learning to use the resources of the Universe with wisdom and efficiency are the bright goals of the Interdiscipline by which the IDC students and faculty make meaningful much of what others regard as non-existant, or choose to disregard entirely. Thus can we bridge the gaps between all disciplines to create something new--a dynamic understanding of our own worlds and the worlds of others.

(The sun never sets--it never rises, either. These terms reflect a 16th Century attitude. Earth's rotation produces the illusion of the sun rising and setting; nonetheless, these terms are common in contemporary speech.)

At its birth in 1972 and now, the IDC major at Emerson brings the highest degree of personal commitment to the widest scholastic latitudes. The Interdisciplinary program is a sure step in the direction of Emerson's proud future.

. . . and to the Class of 1974 —

If we let the light of joy shine from our eyes,
we shall indeed illuminate the world.

Thanks for the opportunity.

First Level
Program

DR. TED ROMBERG

The Emerson graduating class of 1974 is very special to the faculty of the First Level Program. We began together in an untried experimental approach to interdisciplinary education. We knew we were the "first" of a new breed of Emerson students and faculty. We learned together failed together and succeeded together. We worked hard or very little. We struggled with a curriculum that was impossible to teach but from which much was learned. We were very aware that flexibility, freedom, self-motivation and personal growth were intangible but very real. We cared for each other with out knowing how to care and sometimes without knowing why this kind of student to teacher relationship was important. We were like a band of explorers, often reluctant explorers, with guides who did not know the way and with maps that were inadequate. We ran into all kinds of obstacles, some real and some imagined and some feared, but we made it. The graduating class of 1974 is unlike any other class of Emerson graduates and the faculty of the First Level Program knows this because we started with them.

E.B.O.N.I.
Emerson's Black Organization with Natural Interest

For the Black students of Emerson College, 1973-74 has been a year of crisis and a year of decision. Along with many of the Black student communities in the United States, we have been faced with the harsh realities of a school administration changing and altering, for whatever reasons, its former committments to its Black students. We fully realize that many of these changes are due to the economic instability of the times but also feel that the economic crisis maybe used as a smoke screen to cover calculated efforts to destroy all the progress that Black Emersonians have achieved. We have made the only feasible decision: to rededicate ourselves to the goals and ideals on which Eboni was founded 4 years ago and let it be known that we will defend and protect them.

It is very hard to express our thanks for the love, friendship, and guidance that Dr. Olatunde Ojo has given the members of Eboni over the years. His presence will be sorely missed on the Emerson College campus. Good luck Tunde, we love you.

Isolation

I sit alone
And think back to when I called them friends.
Where are they now?
I see them,
Standing over there in a crowd,
Ignoring me.
My so-called good friends putting forth the
Great effort of a hello,
And then they too pass me by.
They laugh.
Once their laughter was shared with me.
Now that I can no longer see it,
Their laughter is directed at me.
When I was happy,
They were there,
Glad to suck the joy from my blood,
Like little parasites.
Now,
Now when everything is not a utopia;
When I need to borrow joy from them,
Where are they now?
Such empty people.
No,
Not even people,
But mere shells.
Strange,
I think I pity them more than I do
Myself.

STEVE, ALIAS EVERYBODY

Illustrious lip-minister
send us your almighty word
half-paralyzed
across countless Friday evenings

Your disjointed syllables and wide lapels take me back to where I never was and never will be except now

Anxious popcorn shivers in the air growing more expensive by the minute
while veal cutlets are only 45¢ in Chesterfield country and Steve, alias everybody, has a new woman

The production of the 1974 EMERSONIAN was a difficult job. Lost rolls of film and inconsistant "people power" were a few of the many problems. However, I would like to thank several people who came to our aid during our final layout session:
